Mount Pleasant, South Carolina – July 21, 2010 – 3Dchat LLC, in partnership with international veteran developer GolemLabs based outside Montreal, Canada, announced today the extension of its promotional free trial of 3Dchat until October 1, 2010.

"Players now have a greater opportunity to try out all of the various activities and unique aspects of the 3Dchat world," said Glenn Garritano, CEO of 3DChat LLC. "We really want users to explore the world and give us feedback on what they like and dislike, what they hope to see in the future, in an effort to make 3Dchat the best virtual world available on the market."

New 3Dchat registered players can enter the virtual world for free up until October 1st, giving them an opportunity for more than two free months to check out the feature-laden 3Dchat that will eventually be accessible only to paying users. Players who sign up any time after October 1 will still receive the standard 30-day free trial.

3Dchat is comprised of a vast virtual world game, a customized social networking environment and a proprietary advanced identity verification service that ensures the people you meet in the 3Dchat virtual world are verified adults, a first for virtual worlds. Built using proven middleware and the Gamebryo engine, the 3Dchat virtual world is filled with activities for players to engage in and interact with each other, ranging from having a drink at the local pub, dancing it up with a bevy of hot singles or engaging in dancing competitions on the KIX stage, to simply meeting and conversing with like-minded adults. All this takes place in realistic environments that replicate the look of real-world locales.

3DChat is a comprehensive virtual world geared toward a kid-free audience that has something for everyone and offers more varied gameplay options and interactions than any other virtual world currently on the market.
